BookBaby announces the publication of *Ending the Tuition Extortion Racket

Ending the Tuition Extortion Racket*, by Paul Streitz, is an investigation into constantly rising tuition, the $1.4 trillion of student loan debt in the United States, who is responsible, and what can be done.

Ending the Tuition Extortion Racket examines the tuition and salary trends across top colleges and universities in the United States and argues that these institutions could easily eliminate student loan debt with little impact on salaries of administrators or academics, especially by reducing the salaries of the president and other top officers. The book highlights that trustees have not lived up to their responsibilities to protect the interests of students and parents. It urges students, parents and alumni to take control and demand that institutions end tuition hikes, replace student loans with scholarships and pay back all outstanding student loans.

The book urges a parent and student tuition and loan strike in the fall of 2019. Parents and student should simply not pay higher tuition or go further in debt.

Mr. Streitz “If one set of parents refuses to pay a higher tuition, the parents are in trouble. If all parents refuse to pay a higher tuition, the colleges and universities are in trouble. If one student refuses to take out a required student loan, the student is in trouble. If all students refuse to take out student loans, the college and universities are in trouble.”

Mr. Streitz is advocating the creation of College Parent Associations and Student Loan Justice Associations on every campus to implement the tuition strike. In order to organize, his book provides website addresses for buttons and promotional material. His book also provides information on how to find out the salaries at every private colleges and universities (go to www.Guidestar.org).
